

How dare these crybabies use the FCC and our congress to protect their precious income. XM traffic and weather is available coast to coast and I would like to be able to depend on it when I travel. I don't want to have to search for a suitable station while I am on the road. I think the FCC made the wrong decision on satellite TV providing national networks and I don't want to see that repeated. Just because I live on one part of the country shouldn't mean that I shouldn't have the right to choose to see what's happening in another part of the country. We now live in a global world and it's about time that the FCC recognizes that. Competition should be what it's all about. If I had a choice of free programming that was equal to XM radio, you can bet I wouldn't be paying a monthly fee for their service. I do not like the NAB (aren't they the same group that tried to stifle TV?) trying to interfere with my choices. Maybe they should be investigated, because in any other business, this would seem to have some anti-trust components.
